A Time of Preparation

How would you prepare yourself spiritually for the holiest of all celebrations? Easter is the most holy festival in the Christian tradition. The first generation of Christians wrestled with this question and that dialogue continued for nearly 200 years. What they resolved is the season we call Lent.

The first Christians actually drew from their Jewish heritage for guidance in celebrating such a significant event as the resurrection of Christ. After all, Jesus was a Jew and so were the first disciples. So let's take a look at some strands from the Jewish tradition that connect with the Christian season of Lent.

The Jewish Tradition

Most Christian spiritual practices have roots in our Jewish heritage. Lent and its related traditions of prayer, fasting and charity are no exceptions. The Jewish tradition offers some amazing parallels with these Christian observances.

The Day of Atonement, or Yom Kippur, was the holiest festival of the year for the nation of Israel. It is the only day when a national fast was required by the Torah. Fasting, repentance and prayer were the order of the day.

On the Day of Atonement, priests offered sacrifices in the temple for the sins of the nation. Then a priest would lay hands on a goat, called the scapegoat, to place the sins of the people on the animal. The goat was then driven off into the wilderness to carry away the sins of the nation.

Fasting was not a widespread practice in Israel until the time of the prophet Malachi around 420 B.C. This was the beginning of the intertestamental period that lasted 400 years until the time of John the Baptist in the 1st century A.D. It became quite common for pious Jews to practice fasting as an ongoing spiritual discipline.

Fasting as a discipline was rarely practiced on its own. It went hand in hand with fervent prayer and charity or almsgiving. There is a beautiful description of this interrelationship in the Apocrypha. This is a collection of Jewish writings from the intertestamental period. We find the passage in the Book of Tobit:

"Prayer is good when accompanied by fasting, almsgiving and righteousness. A little with righteousness is better than much with wrongdoing. It is better to give alms than to treasure up gold. For almsgiving delivers from death, and it will purge away every sin. Those who perform deeds of charity and of righteousness will have fullness of life; but those who commit sins are the enemies of their own lives" (Tobit 12:8-10 RSV).

The passage is an elegant description of the relationship between prayer, fasting and charity or almsgiving. It also points out that these practices will purge sin, as a change of heart, and restore fullness of life. Therefore, pious Jews were quick to maintain a regular practice of prayer, fasting and charity.

It is interesting to note that Jesus, in his Sermon on the Mount, admonished the Jews of his time on the way they practiced prayer, fasting and charity. He pointed at people who did these acts of piety to show off their righteousness. He called them hypocrites because they had false motives. They made sure that other people saw their piety. They would not receive any reward.

By the time of John the Baptist and Jesus, the Pharisees had established a practice of weekly fasts on Mondays and Thursdays. They believed that such a strict intensity of self-denial would accelerate the coming of the long awaited Messiah.

The Jesus Tradition

The observance of Lent and Lenten practices also have roots in the Jesus tradition. We know that Jesus spent forty days in the desert preparing for his public ministry. He ate nothing at all during these days and became very hungry.

Jesus fasted in order to prepare for holy service. This is a parallel concept to preparing for a holy celebration, like Easter. His disciples understood this tradition and carried this practice of fasting into their Christian spirituality.

Jesus also gave a hint that fasting would be an appropriate way to mourn his death. The Gospel of Luke tells a story where a group of Pharisees challenged Jesus because his disciples did not follow their practices of fasting.

"Jesus answered, 'Can you make the friends of the bridegroom fast while he is with them? But the time will come when the bridegroom will be taken from them; in those days they will fast.'" (Luke 5:34-35 TNIV).

Remember that fasting is an expression of grief during a time of mourning. Every good Jew understood that fasting was inappropriate for a celebration or feast. Friends of the bridegroom shared his joy in celebration. A wedding is not a time for fasting.

Then Jesus hinted that the bridegroom, he himself, would be taken from his disciples. He made the point that there would be a time for fasting to mourn his death. His disciples remembered this hint and instituted a fasting period to mourn his death in preparation for the Easter celebration of his resurrection.

The Early Church

The observance of Lent, including fasting and charity, as preparation for Easter is part of the apostolic tradition. In terms of Christian history, the Apostolic Fathers were disciples of the Twelve Apostles who left behind a collection of writings ranging well into the 2nd century.

Fasting was established as a way to prepare for the celebration of Easter while the Twelve Apostles were still alive. But the time period for fasting, when it should begin and when it should end, varied.

Differences also grew regarding the appropriate day to celebrate Easter. Initially, Easter was observed on the day after the Jewish Passover. Think about it like this; there was the day when Jesus was crucified, the day of Jewish Passover when Jesus lay dead in the tomb and the day when Jesus was resurrected. Easter day followed the Passover.

Fasting was established as a way to prepare for the celebration of Easter while the Twelve Apostles were still alive.

Jewish Passover was fixed on the fourteenth day in the month of Nisan. Therefore, it was observed on any day of the week. However, as time passed, Sunday (called the Lord's Day) became the day when Christians recognized a weekly celebration of the resurrection. All of this is part of the apostolic tradition.

A significant sequence of links in the golden chain of apostolic succession runs like this: Jesus had a disciple named John, then John had a disciple named Polycarp and then Polycarp had a disciple named Irenaeus. The early church used these relationships to help sort out orthodox writings from heresy by tracing the chain of teaching back to Jesus.

As a point of interest, Irenaeus (died 202 A.D.) was the first person to collect all the writings that make up the books of the New Testament. He also had a number of other writings in his collection, like The Shepherd of Hermas, that were treasured by early Christians. Irenaeus also recorded significant events in the life and ministry of his spiritual father, Polycarp.

Early Church Dispute

There was a dispute between the Eastern churches represented by Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, and the Western churches represented by Anicetus, Bishop of Rome, about the observance of Easter along with fasting as preparation for that celebration. The Eastern churches sent Polycarp to Rome in an effort to persuade Anicetus to conform the Western observances to theirs. Irenaeus records this matter in a letter:

"The dispute is not only about the day, but also about the actual character of the fast. Some think they ought to fast for one day, some for two, others for still more; some make their 'day' last forty hours on end."

The Eastern churches celebrated Easter on the day after the Jewish Passover without regard to the day of the week. Western churches, under the authority in Rome, observed the celebration of Easter on Sunday, the Lord's Day. Issues about fasting are more complex.

The observance of fasting forty hours relates roughly from the time when Jesus died on the cross to the morning when he was resurrected from the tomb. They reckoned that to be about forty hours. Others fasted one day and still others fasted two days. These observances relate to the day Jesus was crucified and the day Jesus lay dead in the tomb.

In that same letter, Irenaeus explains why the differences in observance could not be resolved:

"Anicetus could not persuade Polycarp not to keep the day, since he had always kept it with John the disciple of our Lord and the other apostles with whom he had been familiar; nor did Polycarp persuade Anicetus to keep it."

But when Polycarp prepared to leave Rome, he and Anicetus embraced in a sign of peace and brotherly love. Although, in some ways, their differences were great and strongly held, they both understood that unity in the body of Christ was a greater matter than their differences. That is a tradition worth remembering and keeping even today.

A Common Fast

Disputes about Easter, fasting and the appropriate time period for Lent continued. There were even differences about the type of fasting. Some ate no food at all. Others fasted meat, poultry and fish. Still others abused the fast by preparing feasts of rich delicacies from foods that were allowed during the fast.

By the time of John Chrysostom (died 407 A.D.), however, a fairly common practice had developed among the churches of the East and the West:

"Therefore our forefathers, considering the mischief arising from such careless approaches, meeting together, appointed forty days for fasting, prayer... and alms-deeds."

The common practice for fasting during the forty days of Lent was to abstain from all food from sundown until three o'clock the following afternoon. Even then, the meal was to be moderate and not lavish in any way.

Remember how Jesus pointed out that fasting and celebrating do not mix? Well, since Sunday, the Lord's Day, was the celebration of the resurrection, it was exempted from fasting during Lent. Still, church authorities admonished the faithful to maintain moderation in Sunday meals in order to keep an attitude of solemn preparation for the celebration of Easter.

Then on Good Friday and Holy Saturday, the people were admonished to abstain from all food, if they were able. This fast ended on Although their differences were great and strongly held, they both understood that unity in the body of Christ was a greater matter.

Lent, Fasting & Charity

Easter morning with the celebration of the resurrection. There was a festive meal celebrated with the entire community of believers.

Baptism 101

In this same period of church history, a tradition of instructing catechumens during Lent was developed. Any group of people engaged in basic instruction on the Christian faith as preparation for baptism were called catechumens.

It became a tradition for the Catechetical Lectures of Cyril of Jerusalem (died 386 A.D.) to be read during Lent as instruction to the catechumens. The lectures addressed basic doctrines of Christian faith and tradition. These new believers were then baptized into the church on Easter.

What do you find interesting about this story of Lent?

How do you see Christian Lenten practices relating to the Jewish tradition?

What do you understand about the observance of Easter being on a Sunday?

Prayer, Fasting & Charity

The apostolic tradition regarding prayer and fasting is recorded in a document known as the Didache, also called the Teachings of the Twelve Apostles. Their instructions give us guidance in forming personal Lenten disciplines and are useful for the practice of these spiritual disciplines in general.

The Didache contains this instruction about fasting before baptism on Easter. As you will see, everyone is encouraged to fast.

(7.4) But before the baptism, let the overseer fast, and also the one being baptized, and all others who are able. Be sure to instruct the one being baptized to fast one or two days before.

Here is a general instruction about weekly fasting on Wednesdays and Fridays. We fast on Wednesday to remember the betrayal of Jesus by the disciple Judas. We fast on Friday to remember the suffering and death of Jesus on the cross.

(8.1) Be careful not to observe your fasts at the times when the hypocrites fast. They fast on the second [Monday] and fifth [Thursday] days of the week, but observe your fast on the fourth [Wednesday] and the sixth [Friday] days.

Then there is this instruction about prayer. We are invited to pray the Lord's Prayer in place of the Eighteen Benedictions, a prayer that was said by the Jews in those days.

(8.3 Concerning the Lord's Prayer) Pray in this manner three times a day.

Pious Christians in these early days took on additional times of prayer. Fasting was encouraged throughout the forty days of Lent but it was not enforced. Food items, or the money to buy food, that was saved by fasting was given to the poor as an act of charity.

Strategies for Lenten Fasting

Now consider some practical ways to integrate these traditions into your own Lenten observance. Keeping with early church tradition, these are matters of personal preference and conscience. Choose your particular disciplines based on a personal desire to prepare for celebrating Easter and grow spiritually.

Fast from food if your health allows. The Desert Fathers understood that the same rule for fasting is not good for all people. So find an amount and a pattern for fasting that is suitable for you.

Some people are more able to abstain from eating than others. Factors like body size, health, metabolism and level of physical activity must be considered. Consult your doctor if you have any health concerns before committing to any type of fast.

Here are some options you can consider for times of fasting:

- Fast a certain meal or meals during the week (breakfast, lunch, dinner).
- Fast some portion of a meal like the main dish or desert.
- Fast on Wednesdays and Fridays.
- Fast from sundown until 3 p.m. or your normal dinner time the next day.

Here are some traditional types of fasts:

- Fast meat, poultry and fish.
- Eat bread and vegetables only (bread, because it is a grain product, is considered a vegetable).
- Avoid rich, spicy foods eating only simple and bland meals.
- Abstain from all foods but drink lots of water.

Prayer

Add times of prayer to your days of Lent:

- Say the Lord's Prayer three times a day.
- When you fast a meal, pray during the time when you would be preparing and eating the food.

- Have morning and evening prayer.
- Add midday prayer.
- Pray the Psalms.
- Consider traditional prayer books like the Book of Common Prayer to use for daily liturgical prayer.

Charity

Here are some ideas for practicing charity:

- Put aside the money or food you saved by fasting to give to the poor.
- Collect your "pocket change" and give it to the poor.
- Volunteer somewhere, outside your church, especially offering your service to strangers.
- Visit people who are alone.
- Invite someone for a meal at your home who cannot repay your hospitality.

Dialogue

How have you observed Lent in the past?

What disciplines would you like to practice this year?

Make a written commitment to your Lenten disciplines.
